EUROPE

Europe has 84 385 671 Covid-19 cases; and the Omicron variant is spreading quickly. Omicron is producing hospitalisations and sadly first deaths have been confirmed with Omicron in the UK.

In these difficult times it is important for the Union to ensure the interoperability of health data at national and EU level. Currently, about one third of member states does not have policies regarding the interoperability of health data.

Focus should be put on knowledge-sharing and funding to help every member state achieve to the same level, and to ensure that we move forward together. Uniform technical standards should ensure that data are collected and shared in a harmonised and integrated way within the EU.

AUSTRIA

Austria lifted its lockdown on Sunday for people with a "2G" pass, meaning they were vaccinated against COVID-19 or recently recovered from the illness.

People without the certificate are only allowed to leave their homes to go to work or for other essential purposes.

There is an 11 pm curfew for restaurants and an FFP2 mask is required on public transport and in indoor spaces.

Tens of thousands of people took to the streets in Vienna over the weekend to protest against mandatory vaccination and other virus measures.
